"We are proud to be recognized by Forbes as one of the best mid-sized companies in America," said Dave Heinzmann, Littelfuse President and Chief Executive Officer. "I would like to thank the global Littelfuse team for their unwavering commitment, and hard work, to significantly grow our company. This recognition highlights the great teamwork and execution of our associates around the world and their focus on delivering the highest levels of quality and service for our customers — everywhere, every day."

In 2021, Littelfuse launched its five-year growth strategy, a continuation of the success from the company's previous five-year strategy. Aligned to the long-term structural growth themes of sustainability, connectivity, and safety, Littelfuse is focused on designing and delivering innovative, reliable solutions for customers across the industrial, transportation, and electronics end markets. During 2021, Littelfuse achieved record annual revenue of $2.1 billion, up 44 percent, and continued its growth focus with two strategic acquisitions — Hartland Controls and Carling Technologies.

In 2022, Littelfuse is celebrating 95 years of excellence and innovation. In celebration of this important milestone, on April 5th — the 95th day of the 95th year —Littelfuse will ring NASDAQ's closing bell in celebration of the people, innovation, and operational and commercial excellence that have driven the company's success over the years.
